McKenzie method is a comprehensive approach to the spine, focusing on "active exercises". Myofascial release is a whole body, hands on approach to treatment that produces a profound healing effect on the body's tissue, eliminating pain and restoring motion. Anodyne therapy emits invisible infrared light that increases circulation in the back thus stimulating healing and relieving pain. The back project utilizes the ATM2 machine which is the most progressive equipment for chronic back pain. The ATM allows patients to rehab primarily by neuromuscular training when reaching a pain free position. Aquatic Therapy is another approach to back pain. The resistance of the waters' viscosity allows for muscle strengthening without the needs of weights.
